

Accommodating Mental Illness in the Workplace, including Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder

Lisa Triano, Triano Law

Thursday, June 20th, 2019 – 11:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

Lisa Triano founded Triano Law in 2010. Lisa has more than 25 years labour and employment experience, including extensive experience in human rights. Lisa has a very unique client focused approach.

In addition to representing employees and trade unions before a variety of labour and administrative tribunals and the courts, Lisa provides workplace training and education seminars, including human rights, occupational health and safety and dispute resolution.

Triano Law represents unions, non-unionized employees and others seeking fairness and justice in the workplace and in other areas of law. Triano Law represents clients at arbitration hearings, both provincial and federal labour boards, human rights tribunals and in court. Triano Law also provides mediation services, workplace investigations, including human rights investigations, and workplace training and education seminars.
